“ Ed was a good man. When I came to Delta in 1989, I was from a small town in NW Georgia and Atlanta was more than a little intimidating to me. Ed and a few of the other seasoned guys took me under their wings and helped me survive. I always purposed in my heart that I would do the same when I was as far along in my journey as they were. Sadly, young people today think they know everything, even though they are as lost as I was back then. At any rate, thanks Ed and my condolences to his wife and children, Ed bragged on you all and often.
