“ I am the soldier that was referenced in today's Atlanta Journal article about Colonel Carrasco. His letter to my mother in October, 1966 put my family at ease during a most trying time. He was the commanding officer of the hospital in Cam Rahn Bay, where I was hospitalized, as well as many others in that area of Vietnam. In spite of his many responsibilities, he took the time to travel to this hospital, read my medical records, and speak with medical personnel. The letter that he wrote was based on the information gathered from these conversations. On behalf of my family, I want the entire Carrasco family to know how much that letter of assurance meant then...and still does.
