“ Grandma, you were my best friend, my confidante, and my conscience. You were my path to God and everything that was ever right in this life. I don't know how to go on without you now. I know you made it home finally to your Mama but I will always want you here with me. I will treasure our talks and the hours spent just holding your hand. I promise I will hold your secrets dear; the ones I know you only shared with me. You were the keeper of our history and it comforts me knowing that you trusted it to me. I'll hold on to that as I hold you in my heart until we are together again. I love you more than you could ever know my pretty little Grandma.

“ I know you've taken your rightful place with God, but I'll always wish you were still here with us. I'm eternally glad I got to hear you tell the "Mamaw take it" story one last time. Please watch over us now from Heaven the way you always did on Earth, we need it more than ever now. I love you, Mamaw, and I hope I can be even half the woman you were and give as much love as you gave to everyone you ever met.
