“ It took me about a week of watching her roll her pallets of coke to the coke display right in front of my seafood counter before I finally built up the courage to approach the legs that I have been secretly looking at and the eyes I have been making contact with. She gave me her phone number and the next day I went over to her apartment and we hung out and got to know each other. That following day she wanted to go and see X-Men but I couldn't afford it at the time. She said that didn't matter so we went to the movies and she got us the tickets and some popcorn. About a quarter of the way through the movie I finally once again built the courage up and asked her if I could hold her hand. She rolled her eyes, grabbed my hand and sat our hands in her lap. Just before the movie ended we had our first kiss. After the movie we went back to her apartment and had a few drinks and we passed out in each others arms.

So say that this was the best woman that I have ever met would not be enough of a description. So much of what I am now is because of her. She found me special enough not only to marry me but to give me the little girl that is going to grow up just as smart, funny and strong as her mommy. No one is ever going to be able to replace the other half of my heart that was taken from me, for she was and forever will be the other half.

“ I am heartbroken at hearing the loss of Kimberly. She and I were very close in High School and Clayton State. We were roommates when we went to France and Spain. I will continue to be praying for all of the family and friends. I pray her little girl never forgets and will be just like her amazing mom. Erica Sartin Barnes

“ All of the family will be in our prayers. Just remember when the sorrows are getting you down and you feel that you can't go on, look at the beautiful daughter,granddaughter,niece she gave you as a gift and always let the sorrows be filled with the wonderful memories that she left in your hearts while she was here. Now she is looking down and sharing even further memories with you and her daughter as her daughter grows. Tell her daughter that a wonderful angel sits on her shoulder every day to help her through the bad and good times as she grows up.
