“ Because Stan loved life and everything historically military and everything Auburn and everything Patty, and everything family, Stan shall have no sorrow in death. You can shed tears that he is gone or you can be happy that he left what he left. You can close your eyes and wish, through the good and the bad, that he could come back, or you can fully open your eyes to see the family and all that is Stan, that he has left behind. Your heart can be closed because he cannot be here, or you can be happy facing tomorrow because you spent time with him when he was here. Stan had lived an amazing life even though it was rather short. I can sum up my enjoyment for the few times of being around Stan in one short story about another funeral we attended together. Stan and I were both in suits. You can tell how important this funeral was as I think it was one of few events I saw Stan wear a suit. We went into a restaurant to have breakfast before the funeral and as we were waiting, I had asked Stan, “Where the hell did you get that blue suit, the white lining is all hanging out on both sides. He spun around a few times to straighten it out and more of the white lining had shown through. After arguing that it looked OK, he stuck both hands in the two side pockets and pulled out a 45 automatic and the longest barreled 38 I ever saw!! The white lining disappeared. He suggested “He was not going anyplace without a little piece of mind”. He clearly understood that making mistakes along the way, just makes getting there, with the people you love, so much better. In closing, I think Stan was ready to meet his maker. Whether his maker is prepared for the ordeal of meeting the fullness of him is another matter.

“ Everyone at Sun Ray Cleaners that knew and loved Stanley will be with his family and friends today in our hearts and minds. He was a brilliant man. Did you know he moved an entire dry cleaning plant with his knowledge? He had others to do some of the grunt work, but the brain work was all Stanley. He was truly amazing! We will miss him tremendously as a coworker and a person. May your memories see you through this time of grief.

“ I am sorry to hear about Stanley. May the God of all comfort be with you. Job asked God if an able body man dies can he live again? (Job 14:14) Verse 15 answers, "You will call, and I myself shall answer you. For the work of your hands you will have a yearning." Yes God longs to bring back all those in the memorial tombs to life. (John 5:28,29) Life in a peaceful earth with no more sickness, pain, or tears. The former things have pass away. (Psalm 37:29, Isaiah 33:24, Revelation 21:4) I pray this will bring you comfort and hope.

“ to Patty, Randy, Courtney and famiily, my heart, my thoughts and prayers are with you, as they have been these last months. I can't make it to Newnan this evening or tomorrow but I wanted you to know I am thinking of you, as I have been all along. I miss my friend but I know heaven has another angel. It is a better place for him, just as my life was a better one for knowing him. He had such a big heart and kind soul. Hugs to all. Coty
